Content Disclaimer

The content of these publications has been compiled by the Southern Forest Products Association (SFPA) as a service to buyers, users, and specifiers of wood building materials. SFPA is a nonprofit trade promotional group supported by Southern Pine lumber manufacturers. SFPA neither grades, tests, manufactures, nor treats lumber products. SFPA is not the origin of the technical information in these publications.

Accordingly, SFPA does not warrant the design values on which span tables are based, and assumes no liability for damage caused or contributed to by the use of such design values. Information pertaining to Southern Pine products and grades, sizes, moisture content requirements and design values is based on the Standard Grading Rules for Southern Pine Lumber, published by the Southern Pine Inspection Bureau (SPIB). Information about pressure-treating methods and performance of treated lumber products is based on the approved standards of the American Wood Protection Association (AWPA). The maximum spans provided herein were determined on the same basis as those in the code-recognized Span Tables for Joists and Rafters and Wood Structural Design Data, both published by the American Wood Council.

The conditions under which lumber is used in construction may vary widely, as does the quality of workmanship. Neither the Southern Forest Products Association (SFPA), nor its members, have knowledge of the quality of materials, workmanship or construction methods used on any construction project and, accordingly, do not warrant the technical data, design or performance of the lumber in completed structures.
